Pro Bono Partnership Names NJ Program

Director

Pro Bono Partnership, a nonprofit organization dedicated to providing free business and transactional legal help to charitable organizations in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, announced the promotion of Alexandra E. Kilduff as its New Jersey program director.

Kilduff has been a staff attorney at the Partnership since 2018, and takes the reins of the New Jersey program following the retirement of Christine Michelle Duffy.

In her new role, Kilduff will continue to provide direct legal services to nonprofits, recruit and support the work of volunteer lawyers from the region's leading corporations and law firms, and develop educational opportunities for nonprofits and volunteers. She will also oversee the Partnership's programming in New Jersey to ensure that nonprofits across the state have access to the legal services they need to succeed.

Prior to joining the Partnership, she was in private practice specializing in commercial and construction litigation and corporate governance.
